7 THE REVIVAL CLIP-ON EARRINGS

This season saw the return of one of fashion's more unlikely trends. But banish images of Dynasty's Alexis Colby removing her chandelier earrings to answer the phone: there is nothing Eighties about the bejewelled designs at Jil Sander or the deco pieces at Oscar de la Renta. When you're channelling Sophia, Grace or a Hitchcock heroine, a pierced ear just doesn't cut it.

LISA MARIE FERNANDEZ FOR PETER PILOTTO
When cult-swimwear designer Lisa Marie Fernandez decided to collaborate with a British label on a capsule collection, she knew it had to be all about the print. Enter the colour supremos of Peter Pilotto, who bring vibrant digital prints to Fernandez's sporty, athletic vibe with head-turning results.

Sexy

MILETI
Swiss art-gallery owner Letizia Crame and a Singaporean banker, Yu Chia Min, are an unlikely pairing for a swimwear label, but Miletì was born after a chance meeting led to discussions of luxury beachwear suitable for different body shapes. The line is already a success in Australia - where better to trial swimwear? - and is now finally available in the UK.

Elegant

VIX
Paula Hermann is the Brazilian brains behind this Californian swimwear line, which has just arrived in the UK. Inspired by her beachside home town, Vitória, Hermann's collection is sexy yet sophisticated. She says she is greatly influenced by her grandmothers - one was a seamstress, the other a beauty queen - and she aims to capture in her collections the skill of the first and the elegance of the other.

Retro

ROKSANDA ILINCIC
The designer's swimwear line is only in its second season, but has already found a niche in the market. As you'd expect from the queen of colour and drape, there are rich jewel-tone suits and Fifties-inspired bikinis, each nodding to Ilincic's retro signature.

9 THE SUMMER SHOES 'TRIBAL' SANDALS

Hunt down jungle beading at Jimmy Choo, fringing at Brian Atwood and beaded cord at Christian Louboutin. For the ultimate sandals, Proenza Schouler's flats tick all the boxes of eccentric, sexy and cool.
